AMENDMENT

Note: This is a supplemental amendment to the amendment filed November 15, 1999. Entry of the amendment filed November 15, 1999, and the following supplemental amendment is respectfully requested.

In the Claims:

Please amend the claims as follows:

36. (Twice Amended) A method for the treatment of a disease condition in a mammal, which condition means the presence of specific cells that are associated with the condition by the expression of a disease specific cell surface structure, wherein one administers to the mammal a therapeutically effective amount of covalent conjugate that is able to activate T lymphocytes to lyse cells that carry the disease specific cell surface structure and comprises:
- a. a biospecific affinity counterpart that is capable of binding to said surface structure, and
 - b. a peptide that
